Sandy Drew Senior Consultant

Education: Mount Holyoke College, B.A.
University of Colorado, M.P.A.

Residence: Sonoma, California

Professional Experience

Sandy joined Marts & Lundy as a senior consultant in 1999. Prior to her consulting work, Sandy served as director of development at Lick-Wilmerding High School in San Francisco. In 1998, she co-founded the California Schools Development Conference specifically to address the need for professional development opportunities for the entire development office team. From 1989 to 1994, Sandy served as the director of development at KQED, San Francisco's public broadcasting television and radio station.

Before moving to the Bay Area in 1989, Sandy lived for twenty years in Denver, Colorado where she served as director of development for several educational and civic organizations.

Sandy served on the Marts & Lundy Board of Directors from 2006 through 2007. In addition to her professional activities, Sandy serves as a trustee at Live Oak School in San Francisco, as class agent for Mt. Holyoke College and as an advisor to several community-based non-profits.
